Prophet Angel faces jail term, life threatening disease and is accused of cheating with many women

Published on 02 March 2015

Written by The Standard

The NR Experiment

Prophet Uebert Angel faces possible jail term, a life-threatening disease and a stream of accusations involving illicit relationships with various women.

Our reporter Phyllis Mbanje recounts the exploits of the youthful preacher who took Zimbabwe's gospel scene by storm.

Flamboyant and sharp tongued, Prophet Angel made his way into the public glare in 2011, championing the gospel of prosperity.

The tall and lanky prophet, who dressed with a flourish, quickly became one of the most sought after prophets locally and regionally.

Fondly referred to as "Papa" or "Major" by his congregants at Spirit Embassy, the youthful prophet - whose collection of flashy cars endeared him to the youthful group in his church - was unapologetic about his boastful tirades.

He reached an all-time high with his miracle money sermons which almost got him into trouble with the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe officials, but wriggled his way out of it and became even more popular.

To add cherry on the pie, beside him was his lovely wife Beverley whose pixie haircut became the trend overnight.

Women paid a fortune (some still do) to have that cut. Brash and just as captivating as her husband, Beverly - who is the co-founder and vice-president and overseer of Spirit Embassy - soon had the masses eating right out of her dainty hands.

The powerful couple knew no boundaries and seemed set to scale even greater heights with their free-to-air station Miracle TV.

Prophet Angel's prophecy of events, however, were met with mixed feelings, with some dismissing him as a fraudster and a cheat.

He is said to have accurately predicted the death of the first president of the autonomous region of Bougainville, off the coast of Papua New Guinea, Joseph Kabui, as well as air crashes in Sudan and Spain and other events, such as football results.

He allegedly gave dates and time to his predictions, some of which came a year earlier to the actual event. Some of his famous predictions included the death of former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

"I was in the visions of the Lord when he started to show me visions of a lady, an old lady in a coffin, a very, very popular lady," he said in a video clip captured that time.

"I want you to write at the end of your pages MT. This is an Anglican Church right here, it's a white lady and it's not in Zimbabwe or Africa," he said.

His "critics" took him to task over the Thatcher prophecy calling his bluff.

However, before long he was at it again in December 2013.

A video statement issued by the Spirit Embassy church and read out by TV personality Tichafa Matambanadzo, claimed that Angel had predicted the death of Nelson Mandela.

"On Sunday the 1st of December 2013 during a live Sunday service Prophet Angel gave another prophetic word concerning the death of the revolutionary leader and first black President of South Africa and asked the congregants to pray over the life of the former statesman," Matambanadzo said.

Once again he received a backlash from many quarters, with some arguing why he only predicted doom and gloom.

He defended "his gift", saying he only spoke as guided by the spirit and not his own making. Not convinced people started digging up dirt and dragging ugly secrets from the prophet's closet.

His "detractors" blasted him for changing his name from Mudzanire to Angel and returning to Zimbabwe after failing to attract a sizeable crowd in United Kingdom where he had relocated years earlier.

He shrugged off the allegation saying he had been called by God to come and preach, perform miracles and heal people.

"But most of his sermons were about what he had achieved materially. At first we were all impressed, but with time it began to irritate some of us," said a former congregant.

She, however, said most of the members were cowed into submission by Angel whom she said was a control freak and wanted to dominate.

"Seeking an audience with him was an impossible task. Only the big partners who brought in loads of cash were allowed to see him even without appointment," she complained.

Socialising with the congregation after service was unheard of as the bouncers around him kept him beyond reach.

Angel received a lot of negative publicity for making people kneel before him. He was accused of drawing his powers from some priest in Nigeria who was closely linked to his spiritual father Victor Kusi Boateng.

He was also accused of using occult charms and power, to perform miracles and a team of pastors from Ghana threatened to come and seek audience with the President Robert Mugabe and expose him.

Feeling the heat Angel relocated to the United Kingdom, allegedly to spend time with his wife, but his departure did nothing to stem the controversy around him.

The media was awash with reports that the esteemed preacher/prophet was also battling a brain tumour.

In December last year he was implicated in a $300 000 fraud case in which he allegedly connived with a local car dealer and swindled a Harare businessman of a Bentley luxury vehicle.

The man claims that Angel refused to return the Bentley given to him on the promise that the "seed" would, in a matter of months, multiple three times in value.

In a typical case of how the mighty have fallen, Angel now has a warrant of arrest over his head.

Efforts to get a comment from Angel last week were unsuccessful.

but in all honesty do u think his flamboyant lifestyle came on the back of the tithes or his businesses

Mabweadziva → King • 6 days ago

87% yes because: Picture this: 10% of $50 is $5, for $100 is $10. His regular followers (religious freaks) were and still are in excess of 10000. Take out 3000 as poor and unable to tithe for the benefit of doubt. Multiply 7000 x $8 on average. You get $56000 and this does not take into account those who pay tithes in hundreds and thousands just to be seen and recognised. Tithes were collected anytime because of the 10% of what you get mantra. If you put together monthly tithes alone, they could easily surpass $90000. Then we come to OFFERINGS which were and still are collected at every gathering including meetings. At an average of $2 each person, these could easily translate to about $30k to $40k. Add that to tithes and you get over, plus or minus $130,000. a month. Less expenditure on administration, venue and staff, perhaps $25,000 per month. MONTHLY BANK BALANCE FOR ANGEL & WIFE = $105,000 TO $110,000. Who will fail to finance a flamboyant life and private business out of this??! If we add private and public cash gifts haaaa, it shoots to over $200,000 a month. I have done the Maths for you mabonga evanhu makapusa.

^ | v • Reply • Share ›

Mseyamwa → King • 6 days ago

Just saying and it could be done anywhere even in the uk. Church presents the best way to do it coz there is nevet a record of who paid how mich in tithe, offering etc, if the Don Pablos mixed their ganja money with that and it's all deposited at the bank as church proceeds, who is to tell?

^ | v • Reply • Share ›

King → Mseyamwa • 6 days ago

nah bro u r speculating too much besides its that very reason why there is strict scrutiny on money that flows in church acc in the UK. Maybe the guy rose from nothing with those british investors he worked for. Remember he was a financial adviser before

^ | v • Reply • Share ›

Mseyamwa → King • 6 days ago

Even you are speculating. Do the UK authorities demand receipts made out to people making cash offerings at services. When the offering baskets are passed around can anyone be certain of how muvh will be in it at the end? People, am sure are still permitted to make anonymous contributions as tithes and offerings.

Not really. I have had real encounters with 'men of God' which I rely on for such discourse. Any other research you may point me to is also third party handover, not forgetting that nowadays, people can shape what may be found about them if their name is searched in cyber. To put it mildly, if one excels in business, one is likely to become famous by it and not by other someother pastime. He should not be taking other peoples' property. Period!

Forbes Africa Magazine Profile

The BBC calls him young and charismatic. Uebert Angel is an enigma who has private audiences with heads of state, parliamentarians, philanthropists, billionaires and once the late world icon, Nelson Mandela.

Business analysts have argued that his unlimited access to world leaders and leading businessmen has given Angel an advantage over his peers in the real estate business.

Regardless of this, Angel, after close investigation, is one of the thousands of successful entrepreneurs across Africa who are creating million-dollar fortunes. These entrepreneurs do not inherit wealth; they earn it.

Do a research again, you will come across articles that say Angel revealed that he was poor when he was in UK. In his own words he revealed that when he started his church he was poor and one of the first miracles he performed was to tell an ATM to release funds since he had just been visited by members of his new church. He revealed that his bank account had nothing, not even a single pound. but after the prayer at the atm the machine mysteriously released 2,000 pounds. Just try and find this article, we once had on this website some years back, but we lost it when we got a new transferred our server from USA to UK.

Im not basing on any "story", you can actually search for the video on youtube. we wrote the story after watching the video. he was giving a testimony and telling people that he had benefitted from miracle money before, that when he revealed the atm incident. im basing on what he said with his own mouth. the video is still online im sure.
